TECHNOLOGICAL SOLUTIONS

Convection Cooking

- The convection microwave can be used in the same way as a traditional oven and serve as a second oven. Microwave energy is not used in this type of cooking.

Combi Cooking

- This function combines microwave cooking with convection cooking to give traditional oven results in less time. It produces beautifully baked and roasted foods fast.

Grilling

- Grilling in a microwave makes it possible to brown meat and poultry. Microwave energy is not used in this type of cooking.

Crusty Cooking

- It allows you to bake bread, cakes and pizza easily with the browning and crisping of a traditional oven.

Auto Cook

- Auto cook function allows you to cook a range of preset popular foods like roasted beef, where you only set the weight of your food.

SAFETY SOLUTIONS

Utensil and Cookware Guide:

1. Glass or Pyrex dishes allow energy to pass through the utensil and heat the food.
2. Microwaves cannot penetrate metal, so don't use metal dishes, utensils or any dish which has metallic decorations or gold-foiled patterns.
3. Do not use recycled paper products when microwave cooking as these may contain small metal fragments which may cause sparks and/or fires.
4. Use round or oval dishes rather than square or oblong ones as food in corners tends to overcook.
5. Narrow strips of aluminium foil may be used to prevent overcooking of exposed areas (on drumstick ends and such) but keep a distance of at least 1 inch (2.54cm) between the foil and the cavity to prevent arcing.
